- * Pharma-related regulatory developments and market outlook
- * Changing dynamics in Chinese pharma/healthcare landscape
- * Interactive discussion and brainstorming with our panel of top experts

Although there are growing concerns about China's economy and uncertainties with the country's healthcare reform, the pharmaceutical industry has remained generally positive about the future outlook of the Chinese healthcare market.

In the face of policy turbulences, pricing pressures and a host of other challenges, the pharmaceutical industry in China had shown unusual resilience last year and delivered steady revenue growth but at lower margins. However, repeated price cuts and cost containment measures have hurt the pharma industry bottom line in 2011.

Large pharma companies, represented by state-controlled companies and MNCs, continued to reposition and expand through M&As, diversification drives, alliances and partnerships, and capacity building for both manufacturing and R&D in 2011.

Although the healthcare reform is relatively more successful in expanding its enrollment to over 95% of the Chinese population, it has made little progress on the part of public hospital reform, the core of healthcare reform, other than some superficial issues.

The deadlock with reform of the Chinese healthcare financing mechanism and public hospitals is also blocking progresses in many other reform areas. Over-emphasis on price bidding by local governments has become a critical issue for provincial-level drug purchase tenders, especially those for essential drugs, and the aftermath is alarming with drug quality freefalling and shortage of low-cost medicines surging.

Drug pricing reform is also stuck, and under mounting public pressure, the NDRC had to initiate more price cuts, as disputes among stakeholders and government agencies continue to prevent it from coming up with a well-defined drug pricing reform framework.

Despite wide-ranging problems, the Chinese government did manage to raise its healthcare funding for both BMI programs. As a result, China's healthcare expenditure composition is undergoing major changes with falling share of personal out-of-pocket expenditures and rising shares of government expenditures and socialized expenditures.

A new Chinese government will fall into place after the 18th CPC Congress and Vice Premier Li Keqiang, who has been in charge of healthcare reform, is presumed to become the new Premier, so the Chinese healthcare reform is expected to stay on course.

The Pharma China Annual Forum 2012 is an English language annual pharma industry event oriented for foreign drug companies in China. The event's emphasis is on healthcare policies, drug regulations, market access issues as well as potential impacts of upcoming changes on the Chinese pharma industry. In addition, various trends in M&A and industry consolidation, R&D and licensing, dynamics of the Chinese healthcare landscape, as well as future market outlook will be explored and discussed.

At least five leading experts will share their knowledge, insights and expertise followed by an interactive panel discussion with speakers and other experts.

What sets this event apart from those organized by conference companies?

- It is an event organized by veteran executives for executives
- Hard-to find/exclusive industry and market information are presented and distributed at the event
- Only industry experts with real world experience are invited to present
- Cost effectiveness – our goal for this event is not profit but to bring value-added services to our subscribers and potential customers.
