Event Highlights

- * Contemporary trends & issues in Chinese Pharma in 2013 and early 2014
- * Healthcare reform and policy impacts on the Chinese pharma sector
- * Pharma-related regulatory developments and market access issues
- * Changing dynamics in Chinese pharma/healthcare landscape
- * Pharmaceutical/healthcare market outlook for 2014 and beyond
- * Interactive discussion and brainstorming with our panel of top experts

By large the Chinese pharmaceutical sector still saw double-digit growth in 2013 despite a host of challenges stemmed from slowing Chinese economy, regulatory shakeups, cost containment measures and price cuts, as well as healthcare reform turbulences. Revenue and profit growth last year inherited the downtrend from 2012, although their rates were still considered robust compared with the global pharma industry and most of other Chinese industries.

Plagued by structural flaws, inadequate government financing as well as conflict of interests among different agencies and stakeholders, China's ongoing healthcare reform remained to be bottlenecked in 2013 despite some superficial progresses.

Meanwhile, developments were across many different areas of drug regulation last year with the newly-created CFDA remaining to be preoccupied with promotion of drug quality and registration/evaluation efficiency.

On the front of drug pricing, NDRC is still overwhelmed by stakeholder disputes and has failed to make up its mind about the reform direction for another year.

There is no doubt the healthcare reform will go on with unchanged slogans. But in reality, both central and local governments will be more financially strapped this year to achieve original reform objectives and they will be forced to rely on cost containment even more with the backdrop of a slowing broad Chinese economy.

2013 had a good start with renewed optimism, but business climate for the pharmaceutical industry in China made a sudden turn in late May when dramatic police investigation of GSK corruption scandal began.

There are no easy solutions for MNC players in China. Companies will need to boost compliance structures, reform business models, refocus China strategies, form more R&D and business partnerships with local companies, target diseases prevalent to China, leverage China's R&D and manufacturing capabilities globally, and integrate commercial investment plans with government objectives.

But don't be discouraged prematurely. Most experts continue to agree that China is set to become the second-largest pharmaceutical market by 2020, and ultimately, the largest one in the world.

The Pharma China Annual Forum 2014 is an English language annual pharma industry event oriented for foreign drug companies in China. The event's emphasis is on healthcare policies, drug regulations, market access issues as well as potential impacts of upcoming changes on the Chinese pharma industry. In addition, various trends in M&A and industry consolidation, R&D and licensing, and healthcare landscape, as well as future market outlook will be explored and discussed.

At least 11 leading experts will share their expertise and insights. The presentation will be followed by an interactive panel discussion with speakers and other experts.

What sets this event apart from those organized by conference companies?

- It is an event organized by veteran executives for executives
- Hard-to find/exclusive industry and market information are presented and distributed at the event
- Only industry experts with real world experience are invited to present
- Cost effectiveness – our goal for this event is not profit but to bring value-added services to our subscribers and potential customers.
